

County approves Sundance addition

PROVO — Sundance Resort received final approval from the County Commission Wednesday to add a screening room and rehearsal hall to its base site.

The commission also approved two resolutions that will help Sundance qualify for $4 million in industrial revenue bonds for the new base buildings and for improving and expanding ski facilities.

Industrial revenue bonds would allow Sundance to use the county's tax-free status in acquiring financing for the project.

Construction of the new buildings will signal the beginning of a $40 million expansion project at the resort.

Final approval for the master plan for the entire project will be on April's Utah County Planning Commission agenda.

If that plan is approved, a conference center, 100 housing units, covered outdoor theater, road changes, and film production facilities will be added to the resort.

Sundance spokesman John Lear said construction of the rehearsal hall will begin immediately. Plans call for it to be completed by June 1 so it can be used during the summer.

"It may be like a ship out of dry dock, but we want to have it done for Sundance Institute this summer," Lear said. "Essentially the hall will be like a pavilion that will be used by skiers in the winter as well."

Lear said the screening hall may not be finished until early in 1986, but

Sundance Resort has been given the go-ahead to add a screening room and rehearsal hall to its base site.
